

Patient flows are essential to avoid clogging up the lake (Hospital)

The first rule: make internal flow mobility the number one priority to facilitate subsequent access from outside the hospital.

Internal flow mobility is essential for driving the flow that frees up space to accommodate the entry of people from outside. The concept of allocating special areas to the Risk Unit can succeed only if priority is given to internal flows between different levels of care intensity.